

2002

Copyright Law Review Committee

Copyright and Contract

The Copyright Law Review Committee is a specialist advisory body established in 1983 to inquire into and report to Government on specific copyright law issues.

© Commonwealth of Australia 2002

ISBN 0 642 21046 2

Note: The law as contained in this report is stated as at April 2002.

Contents

	page
Chapter 1
Preface	1
The Committee	1
Course of reference	2
The Terms of Reference	3
Chapter 2
Executive Summary	7
Chapter 3
The Exceptions	13
The copyright balance	13
The 3-Step Test	16
First step: certain special cases	18
Second step: normal exploitation	19
Third step: not unreasonably prejudicial	19
The copyright balance and the Digital Agenda amendments	21
The Exceptions	23
Fair dealing	25
Fair dealing for research or study – ss. 40 and 103C	29
(a) Definition of ‘research’ and ‘study’	31
(b) Legislative guidance on determining ‘fairness’ – ss. 40(2) and 103(2)	31

(c) The quantitative test – s. 40(3)	33
(d) The application of the fair dealing exceptions to the digital environment	35
Fair dealing for criticism or review – ss. 41 and 103A	36
Definition of criticism and review	36
Fair dealing for reporting news – ss. 42 and 103B	38
Judicial proceedings and professional advice – ss. 43 and 104	40
Library and archives exceptions	41
Historical development of the library copying provisions	43
Theoretical relationship between fair dealing and library copying provisions	45
(a) Reproducing and communicating works by libraries and archives for users for research or study – s. 49	47
Policy justification of s. 49	49
Proportion of a work that may be copied – s. 49	50
Documentation requirements – s. 49	51
User requests and the ‘digital agenda’	52
(b) Reproducing and communicating works for other libraries or archives	55
Current inter-library copying provisions – s. 50	57
Proportion of a work that may be copied – s. 50	58
Reproducing and communicating unpublished works in libraries or archives – s. 51 & s. 52	60
(c) Adding to, preserving and replacing material in a library or archives collection – ss. 51A and 110B	61
Preservation – ss. 51A(1), 110B(1), and 110B(2)	62
Research at a library or archives	63
Reproducing and communicating works in Australian archives – s. 51AA	64
Other technology-based exceptions (including Digital Agenda reforms)	64
Reproducing computer programs	64

Extending the definition of ‘computer program’	67
Reproduction for the purpose of simulcasting (ss. 47AA and 110C)	68
Circumvention devices	69
Statutory Licences	70
Statutory licence schemes for copying by educational institutions and institutions assisting persons with an intellectual or print disability – Parts VA & VB	74
The Copyright Tribunal	75
Introduction of Parts VA and VB	75
Current Parts VA and VB statutory licence schemes	76
Administration of the current statutory licence schemes	77
Relationship between fair dealing for the purposes of research and study and Part VB statutory licences	80
Part VC statutory licence scheme	81
Crown copying – s. 183(1)	81
Miscellaneous Exceptions	82
Reproduction and related uses	83
Reproduction of writing on approved label for containers for chemical product (ss. 44B and 112B)	83
Certain reproductions and publication of artistic works (ss. 65, 66, 67, and 68)	83
Reproduction of part of artistic work in later work (s. 72)	84
Reconstruction of buildings (ss. 73(1) and 73(2))	84
Filming or recording of a television or sound broadcast for private and domestic use (s. 111)	84
Reproductions of editions of works (s. 112)	85
Reproduction of statutory instruments and judgments (s. 182A)	85
Performances, transmissions and broadcasts	86
Performances of published literary or dramatic works (s. 45)	86

Performances of works at places where people reside or sleep or in respect of a club or other non-profit organisation (s. 46)	86
Causing sound recording to be heard at a guest house or club (s. 106)	87
Performance of works or other subject-matter in the course of educational instruction (s. 28)	87
Public performance of certain works, sound recordings and films by the reception of broadcasts (ss. 199(1), (2) and (3))	88
Public performance of recordings that originate overseas (s. 105)	88
Public performance of old news film (s. 110(1))	89
Public performance of works contained in old films (s. 110(2))	89
Other Uses	89
Inclusion of works in collections for use by places of education (s. 44(1))	89
Use of record embodying film soundtracks (s. 110(3))	90
Use of works and broadcasts for educational purposes (ss. 200(1), (2) and (2A))	90
Conclusion	91
Chapter 4
What is Happening	93
Introduction	93
Part I: The nature of the new communications environment	93
New forms and uses of material	94
New markets	95
New means of remunerating copyright owners	97
New practices in the digital environment	100

New ways of controlling infringement	100
Use of technological protection measures	101
Control of initial access	102
Control of copying	103
Serial copyright management system (SCMS)	105
Encryption	105
Digital Watermarking and other monitoring devices	108
Rights management databases	109
Transactional Agreements and contract-based control of access	109
Implications of the new practices in the digital environment	111
Is there an access right?	114
Part II: Extent to which electronic trade in copyright material is subject to agreements which exclude or modify the copyright exceptions	116
Committee's survey of online licence agreements	129
Whether the situation is any different in relation to trade in copyright material that occurs offline	132
Committee's survey of offline licence agreements	134
The nature of any difference	135
Licensing of access	136
Digital material is more vulnerable to unauthorised copying	137
Copyright (and other) material can be protected by TPMs	138
Direct contracting with end-users on a mass scale is possible	140
Contracts are more likely to be governed by foreign law	141

Chapter 5
Enforceability	143
Introduction	143
Part I: Agreements covered by Australian law	143
Formation of contracts	143
Incorporation of terms	144
Assent to terms	146
Remedies	148
Unconscionable conduct in equity	149
Consumer protection legislation	152
Unconscionability under the Trade Practices Act	152
Contracts Review Act	156
European Union Directive on Unfair Contracts	157
Misrepresentation	159
Equity (other than unconscionability)	161
Actions to restrain the exercise of legal rights	161
Defences to an action in equity	161
Contracts that are contrary to public policy	164
Contracts in restraint of trade	164
Public interest	167
Public Interest – United Kingdom	170
Statutory prohibitions	173
Expressio unius est exclusio alterius	174
Similarity of subject matter	175
Whether asserted application is discoverable on the face of the Act	176
Whether inconsistency or injustice results from applying the principle	176
History of legislation and separate origins of particular provisions	177

Extrinsic materials	178
Restrictive Trade Practices	180
Part II: Jurisdictional Issues	184
Jurisdiction	185
Choice of law	192
Enforcement	193
International approaches	194
The Hague Convention	195
Grounds of jurisdiction	196
Summary of Hague Convention	197
UNCITRAL	197
Recommendation	199
Chapter 6
Overseas Examples	201
Part I: Europe	201
The Copyright Directive	205
Development of the Copyright Directive	211
Other EU legislation	218
Part II: The United States	221
US Copyright Act	222
Fair Use	222
Libraries and archives	223
Computer programs	223
The DMCA	224
First sale doctrine	225
Recent case law	226
Hollings Bill	233
The DMCA Report	234

Digital first sale doctrine	235
Temporary copies and archival copies	238
Impact of s. 1201 of the DMCA on fair use and other copyright exceptions.	238
Whether contracts pre-empt the US Act	239
Mass-market licences	242
The US legislative approach to electronic trade: Article 2B and UCITA	243
The effects of UCITA	245
Public policy	246
Unconscionable contracts	247
Transfer of contractual interests	247
Terms post purchase	247
Limitations on use of information	248
Electronic self-help	248
Unilateral modification of terms	249
Warranties	250
Right to inspect	250
Choice of Law	250
Meeting of UCITA Standby Committee	250
Public comment	251
Transfer of licences	251
Printed record of agreement	252
Electronic self-help	252
Forum selection	252
Open source software	252
Reverse engineering	253
Progress and wider effects of UCITA	253

Chapter 7
Should agreements which purport to exclude or modify the copyright exceptions be enforceable?	257
Make no recommendation for legislative change	260
Mandate exceptions	262
The Copyright Interest	266
Statutory Licences	269
Miscellaneous Exceptions	271
Other options	271
Consumer protection	271
Mandate exceptions in relation to mass-market licences	271
Encouraging 'fair' agreements	272
Codes of Conduct	272
Model Licences	273
Confidentiality Agreements	273
Concluding remarks	274
Recommendations	274
Chapter 8
Circuit Layouts	275
International obligations in relation to circuit layouts	275
Background to the Circuit Layouts Act	276
The nature of protection	277
Is the Circuit Layouts Act affected by contract or other modifications?	278
Recommendation	279

Appendix A
List of submitters and acronyms	281
Appendix B
List of attendees at the Committee's Consultative Forum – 4 October 2001.	283
Appendix C
List of the abbreviations	285
Appendix D
Table of Exceptions	293
Appendix E
Survey of agreements conducted by the Committee	301
Appendix F
Hague Convention	347
Appendix G
EU institutions and legislative procedures	351
Appendix H	353
Maryland's UCITA	353
Virginia's UCITA	355